MEXICAN HELD ON THEFT CHARGE.

stuck my gun in his face. I told him to keep quiet, that I was chief of police. We then took him to the police station and he was held on a charge of theft.

When we got to Silberberg's and introduced the parties, A. Silberberg remarked that he himself did not want any of the reward money, but wanted his clerk to have a part of it, because he had sent his clerk over to the bank to notify me about the money. My reply was, "If you sent him over to notify me, then the bank clerk is not entitled to any of the reward, because that being true, the bank clerk only carried out your instructions."

Cummings Identifies Prisoner.

"When Mr. Cummings came up to my office that morning to inquire whether I had learned anything about the money and other property he saw defendant sitting in the detective's office and he immediately remarked that defendant was the man he had seen following him on two evenings. Mr. Cummings did not know at that time that we had recovered his property. It was necessary for Mr. Cummings to pass through the detective's office to reach my office. When he came into my office he asked me if I had learned anything. I had his property on my desk at the time and pointed to it, and he identified the money and property and gave me a receipt for it. He also counted out $500 on my desk and said, 'This is yours, chief; I want you to have it.' I told him that a part of the reward should go to the bank clerk who gave me the tip. He said, 'No, you keep this. I will pay the bank clerk $100.' I still remarked that I thought the bank clerk was due a part of the $500, and he said no; that he would pay the bank clerk. With that he threw another $100 bill down on the table."

Owner Testifies.

N. P. Cummings testified: "I have been in El Paso since the 2nd or 3rd of December, 1910. On the evening of January 3 I returned from the Juarez race track and knew that I had my wallet at that time, as I took out some of the money. On the following morning I missed the wallet. I was in the habit of carrying the wallet in my left hand trousers pocket. Mr. Stansel came up to the hotel and I gave him a list of the property. On Wednesday morning I walked into the police station to see if they had found any trace of the property. I went upstairs and rapped on the door. An elderly man (Mr. Burnham) came to the door and asked what I wanted. I told him that I was Mr. Cummings. He said, 'Come in.' As I stepped into the room and passed through to the chief's room I noticed a Mexican sitting in one corner of the room next to the window. I recognized him as one who had stood near me in the union station on Sunday evening, January 1. After I had had my dinner at the station that evening I found him following me about two and a half blocks toward town. He got so close to me that he annoyed me. I turned around and looked at him and he stopped following me. I told them at the station that I had found defendant following me, as I have stated here. I told them that before I knew they had found the jewelry. They then showed me the wallet containing about $1700 in money, including a lot of Mexican and American silver. The property shown me by the chief was mine. It was short about $400 and some cents of the amount originally in the wallet."

INCOME TAX

crise of the power to tax incomes is common. England has taxed incomes at different times for over a century. It was used in that country for the first time in 1798. It was a war measure growing out of the necessity for putting great armies in the field to cope with France and Napoleon. William Pitt suggested it when other methods of raising revenue were failing. It was repealed after the battle of Waterloo, but later re-enacted. Gladstone tried unsuccessfully in 1874 to get it repealed and since then the taxation of incomes in England has continued as an unbroken policy. France has adopted the income tax. Italy has an income tax system which is much like the English plan. For years, incomes have been taxed by the German states, the cantons of Switzerland, the Netherlands, Austria, Belgium, Sweden and Denmark.
